Not illustrated. 1737 edition. Excerpt: ... sounds were more than human. Hark! Again! O honour'd friend, no adverse haunter streams In sight. No shout proclaims the Persian freed From his late terror. Deeper let us plunge In this mysterious dwelling of the nymphs Whose voices charm its gloom. In smiles rejoind Diomedon.... I see thy soul enthralld. Me thou wouldst rank among the nuletter'd root Of yon Barbarians, should I press thy stay. Tune favours too. Till Agis be return'd We cannot act. Indulge thy eager search. Here will I wait, a sentinel unmov'd, To watch thy coming. In exploring haste The impatient Thespian penetrates the cave. He finds it bounded by a steep ascent Of rugged steps; where, down the hollow rock, A modulation clear, distinct, and slow, In movement soleum, from a lyric string, Dissolves the stagnant air to sweet accord With these sonorous lays. Celestial maids! While, from our cliffs contemplating the war, We celebrate our heroes, O impart Orphean magic to the pious strain! That from the mountain we may call the groves; Swift motion through these marble fragments breathe, To overleap the high Oetean ridge, And crush the fell invaders of our peace. The animated hero upward springs, Light as a kindled vapour, which, confin'd In subterranean cavities, at length Pervading, rives the surface, to enlarge The long imprison'd flame. Ascending soon, He sees, he stands aghast, then reverent kneels. An aged temple, with insculptur'd forms Of Jove's harmonious daughters, and a train Of nine bright virgins, round their priestess rang'd, Who stood in awful majesty, receive His unexpected fret. The song is hush'd. The measure movement on the lyric chord In faint vibration dies. The priestess sage, Whose elevated port and aspect rose To
