

Memoir of Rev. Luther Rice: One of the First American Missionaries to the East (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Memoir of Rev. Luther Rice: One of the First American Missionaries to the East
In consenting to prepare the following memoir, the author was influenced not only by a request of the Trustees of the Columbian College, but by the solicitation and advice of several in whose judgment he had confidence. The hope also was entertained that some good might be done to the cause of evangelical religion. The task, delicate and difficult as it was, has been performed with a steady purpose to do justice to the memory of an endeared Christian brother, and to consult the honor of that Redeemer whom he trusted and served. The work might have been considerably enlarged, but it was deemed most expedient, as far as possible, to condense the materials, while nothing has been knowingly omitted which was necessary to make out a complete portraiture.
