

The Romney Riddle

Romney is portrayed as a man of dedication and temper. He believes in his own myth and rides roughshod, when he can, over any and all in his way, as was evidenced by his characterization of Sen. Charles Percy (R., 111.) as a political opportunist, merely because he was being mentioned for the White House which Romney regards as his very own. There is detailed exploration of Romney's record, his views or lack of views, his political ruthlessness against members of his own party who dared oppose him in his state, and his love affair with the eastern kingmakers.
