

Was That a Name I Dropped?

Paul Brogan grew up in picturesque Concord, New Hampshire, a city that might have been an appropriate setting for a Norman Rockwell painting. From an early age he dreamed of going to Hollywood and working in the movies. The images that flickered on the huge movie screens, as well as from the television console that sat in the living room seemed to beckon to him. That road to his dreams, however, was fraught with many detours and demons that threatened to derail not only his hopes but his life as well. Was That a Name I Dropped? tells in chilling detail a true story about growing up gay and battling depression so deep that suicide seemed like the only option available. Paul's road to Hollywood is colorful and filled with memorable moments and characters. After being brutally raped at 18, Paul relied more and more on a fierce determination and refusal to listen to the naysayers who told him he had to simply settle for. He didn't listen and his story, filled with interesting anecdotes about the many celebrities he encountered on his journey, gives hope to everyone who wants to make their own dream come true. Filled with stories about his friends and acquaintances including Doris Day, Katharine Hepburn, Elizabeth Taylor, Carol Channing, Eileen Fulton and Jim Bailey among others, Was That a Name I Dropped? will leave the reader smiling, laughing and holding back tears as they join Paul on his journey.
